THE FALL FOLIAGE CLASSIC IS COMING

FROM BOOT TO HOPE

MAY - AUGUST 1991

by Beverly Lambert

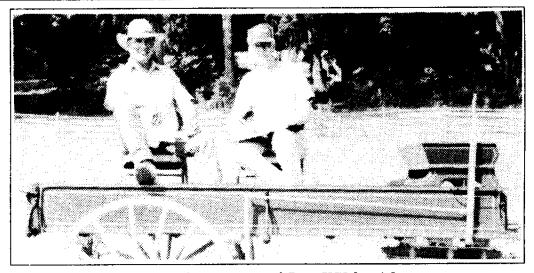

Boot's trip to Virginia was not an unqualified success (nothing in dog trialing is), but I was satisfied that she performed up to her abilities. At the Blue Ridge trial she made the gather without difficulty and ran out of time before completing a very good drive. At Ligon's, the gather was dog-leg shaped and caused many young dogs a great deal of confusion. Boot left on the 400 yard gather with no idea of the location of the sheep. She took her re-direct well and completed a satisfactory gather. The rest of her run was a bit ragged but we finished on time. In June I moved Boot into open at the Jagger's trial in Pennsylvania. Boot is by no means experienced or sufficiently well trained to be a competitive open dog at this stage. I don't get to very many novice trials, however, and running her in open allows me to give her the trial experience that she needs. At Pennsylvania she ran very well both days, encouraging us both.

All dogs have a weakness. Boot's weakness is in the way she comes on to her sheep. She is not nearly aggressive enough in moving the sheep. She follows the sheep at the pace they set and flanks when told to. If the sheep don't move, she will stand and look at them. Encouraged to act, she will fly in and grab one. Like all weaknesses, this problem is most apparent when trialing. Boot doesn't move her sheep along. So we frequently run out of time before finishing the course. On really tough sheep, Boot can't shift them short of a grip. Primarily this is a problem of confidence. As Boot gains confidence at trials, I believe she will have much less difficulty with shifting her sheep. In the interim I need to find a way of increasing her push. So I have selected 5 of my slowest Dorset ewes. I encourage Boot to come on to the sheep by calling her name and giving her a "get 'em" command. At home this results in a quick grip and running sheep. I hope at trials, where Boot is more subdued, it will result in a more aggressive stand vis a vis the sheep. Boot's other big problem at trials is a much more common one for young dogs. She can't stand still. I am dealing with this at trials by telling her firmly to stand still all the time I am penning and shedding. This is only moderately successful, as she acts as if she were standing on hot coals. At home I try to set up situations where it is difficult for her to

NEW JERSEY STATE SHEEP DOG TRIALS AT FOSTERFIELDS

Morristown, NJ August 31-September 2, 1991 Judge: John Atkinson

by Gene Sheninger

2900 spectators! Although the Rockaway Township Sheep Dog Trials have been an annual event for two years, these were the FIRST New Jersey State Sheep Dog Trials at Fosterfields. For a relatively unknown trial at a new site, everyone was delighted with the turnout. Nobody expected the huge crowds - there was a 1-1/2 hour wait to get in the gate. We were written up in the New York Times, and carried in all of the local papers. The County is already planning for next year's trial.

Morris County funds and operates Fosterfields Living Historic Farm from their allocation from the County Tax Budget and whatever donations they are able to solicit. Very little is generated from gate receipts or the farm itself. The Farm is a Turn-of-the-century living museum. It continues to be operated by the same methods that were popular then, it is planted the same, the animal husbandry is the same.

That is how a Sheep Dog Trial fits in at Fosterfields. Our Border Collies date back well over 300 years; trials began in Wales in 1873; and trials were introduced to America in the 1880's. The trial witnessed by 2900 spectators today at Fosterfields was little changed from what could have been witnessed (albeit by far fewer spectators) at this very farm at the turn of the century.

The Trials themselves were a delight. Everyone enjoyed the

EDITOR'S NOTES

Here we are, sitting down to write the column that brings the fall trial season to a close. Only two more weeks until the Fall Foliage Championship Trial and Futurity. It seems like only yesterday that we were typing the April Issue that kicked off the trial season.

The Fall Foliage Classic is being held this year at the farm of Vergil & Bonnie Holland in Hobart, NY. Vergil & Bonnie have been putting in a lot of work to make this year's event a smashing success. The field is lovely, open and on a hilltop.

The fall colors should be at their peak and the views should be spectacular. Come on up, even if it is only so that you can see the colors and share in the camaraderie of the event.

However, WE DO NEED YOUR HELP!!! If you can come up to help, it would be greatly appreciated. Please call Vergil or Bonnie at (607)538-9160 if you can help.

In this issue, please take time out to study the article by Carol Campion. It deserves all of our attention. She has recognized, through her personal experience with a very good but dysplastic dog, a problem that must get the attention of all responsible breeders. As bad as the AKC breeding program may seem to many of us, a breeding program that proliferates dysplasia or blindness is worse. Their program, at least, attempts to maintain soundness of the breed. True, they breed for color, size, ears, tails, and coat; but they also breed for conformation. We claim to breed for intelligence and working ability, but there are too many who are ignoring conformation faults -particularly dysplasia and blindness. Carol's article is must reading.

Please, all of you with an interest in the Border Collie, come on out to the Fall Foliage Championship Trial. Let's support our Association.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

by Carol Campion

A great deal of alarm has been generated recently over the issue of the intrusion of the A.K.C. into the realm of our Working Border Collie - and justifiably so! Let us take this opportunity to focus on another Border Collie issue that is equally as threatening and that has been screaming for attention for a long time. It too pertains to the Border Collie being bred to retain its work instinct. But this time let us look at the commitment to responsible breeding; breeding that has been done to guarantee that the work instinct we are so righteously striving to protect has a sound body to work in - a body that enables the possibility to work throughout the dog's life.

The Border Collie is a very popular breed these days. This is not because there is an insatiable number of working farms demanding work dogs. Sheep farming and cattle farming are not the preferred livelihood of Americans. Sheep farming in the U.S.A. is on the decrease. But at $200 to $350 per pup, a litter can still generate anywhere from $200 to $3000. There are some out there that breed their bitches twice a year and are able to sell all the pups. Many of these pups are not being sold to work homes, but to modern homes, obedience homes or pet homes. This is not a criticism of these homes, but with such a low demand for serious working dogs, why are so many being bred? For the income of course!! And it is this greed factor that is causing a major problem. This frantic breeding of Border Collies is producing a lot of unsound pups from stock with excellent working backgrounds. So while the A.K.C. intrusion holds the prospect of future Border Collies with little or no instinct being bred, we the protectors of the "working" Border Collie are irresponsibly breeding dogs that preserve this work instinct, but their ability to work is being hindered by dysplasia and blindness. It is very possible that, if the A.K.C. breeders do breed responsibly, if they do check eyes and hips before breeding, they will be producing sound dogs that do not want to work, while we, the proud preservers of the "working" dog, produce the dog that wants to work, but cannot. Which is the more destructive??

Most of the owners of that excellent but dysplastic working dog who was bred from "champion" lines are feeling helpless frustration. There is practically nothing that can be done to cure him; and, except for drugs, there is even very little that can be done to ease his pain. These dysplastic "working" dogs become arthritic long before their time, they cannot work in winter, they quit due to lameness, and cannot at times complete small tasks due to their discomfort. Worst of all is that there is no way to know that your dog is dysplastic until you can have him X-rayed and OFA tested at the age of TWO. How much caring, how much time and energy have you expended on your pup; only to find out two years later that he is dysplastic. We all have the right and DUTY to point to all of those irresponsible breeders who are knowingly producing dysplastic and/or blind offspring and express our outrage.

There have been numerous articles written on these defects. Many breeders have been approached concerning this information and the rising concern over so many defective dogs in their breeding programs. Some have shrugged the facts off. Some have gone on reproducing the same problems and plan on doing so in the future. They have told us so and continue to do so. They are stealing from us and from the future of the breed just to satisfy their pocketbooks. Those of us who have

Judge: Brian Bell

The trial field was quite small because the horseshoe throwing championship was taking place next to the post. All of the dogs had to contend with horseshoes being thrown at them, the loud-speaker system blasting across the trial field, airplanes landing at the nearby Bangor Airport and all of the regular amusements of a busy midway. A few of the younger dogs were clearly dismayed by their surroundings but most of the dogs performed admirably. The sheep were a difficult combination of 1 Scottish Blackface, 1 Dorset and a lamb. The course was a New York style figure eight drive with a pen and nearly impossible shed. The top ten dogs ran twice with the placings determined by combining the scores. Ties were broken on the combined outwork of the two runs. Patty and Jet were so closely tied for second place that it was necessary to use their combined drive scores to break the tie.

EASTERN MAINE STATE CHAMPIONSHIP SHEEP DOG TRIAL July 28, 1991 Judge: Brian Bell

by Beverly Lambert

This second day of Maine trials was held at the Lambert/Mc-Donough farm on the same sheep used at the Bangor Fair. On their home turf the sheep proved even tougher than at the fair. Some of the sheep were impossible to pen and all of them were very difficult to shed.

The Pro/Novice and Ranch dogs had a particularly difficult time. The sheep were very familiar with the field and were constantly watching for any weakness or inattentiveness on the part of the dog or handler that would allow an escape to the woods. Only one ranch dog managed to complete the course to receive a score.

IN SEARCH OF ALLERGIC ENTERITIS

by Jan Kubas

Our search for allergic enteritis began on a warm, summer day in June when I came home to find my 2-1/2 year old male BC, Kastle, with diarrhea. This was an unusual occurrence for my normally healthy, full of energy dog. He was curled up in a ball in the kitchen. His soft, brown eyes followed my everywhere, almost pleading with me to help him. I phoned my veterinarian and got the answering machine. I called his beeper and he promptly returned my call. He had me stop all food or water and dose him with 3 tablespoons of Pepto-Bismol every 2 hours. That was a lot of fun. Have you ever seen a pink, black, and white BC? I'm sure we have all been there at one time or another. At about 11 p.m. his diarrhea had become projectile and was mixed with blood. I called the beeper again. This time it was a while before my vet called me back because he was on a farm call. He finally got back to me sometime after midnight. He told me to keep dosing him and, if there wasn't any improvement, he wanted to see him first thing in the morning.

Needless to say, neither Kas or I were able to sleep. He would periodically doze but the diarrhea would soon take over again. Kas and I spent the night on the porch after trying a crate in the house. I toted my sleeping bag and pillow outside and spent the rest of the night just watching him. In the morning, his condition had worsened and he was now only passing blood. I phoned the vet's office and said I would be in immediately. (Immediately, mind you, is a 35 minute drive.) When we arrived, Kas was quickly admitted and blood samples were taken. At this time all of his blood work was normal. Dr. Findlay began to suspect Parvo. I was horrified! A healthy dog, with up-to-date vaccinations with Parvo. I couldn't believe it. Steven's explanation was that you never know how immune vaccinations make a dog until they come face to face with that disease. If that's true, it is a very distressing matter, especially when you consider the amount of money we spend vaccinating our dogs.

Kas was put on IVs to counteract the dehydration from the diarrhea and a wide-spectrum antibiotic to start fighting off whatever this was. Function tests of his liver and kidneys were done along with a Parvo and a Corona test. Kas was hospitalized from Saturday to Tuesday with no more diarrhea, but he wasn't given his first taste of food until Monday night. He was put on Tagamet to neutralize his stomach and Baytril to help fight an infection which showed up in his second, more intense, series of blood work. His Parvo test and Corona test came back negative and Kas was released with his medication and a prescription diet that was easy on his digestive system. His blood work showed a bacterial infection primarily in his intestines.

For three weeks Kas seemed to be doing well. He was, however, steadily losing weight. This was because of the prescription diet. It wasn't meant to put on weight, but to be easy on the intestinal tract. By the last Monday of June, I began switching Kas back to his regular food. On Wednesday, he began vomiting yellow bile with specks of blood in it. He had finished his medication so I phoned the vet and he put him back on Tagamet and another bag of prescription diet. By Saturday, he had diarrhea and then began vomiting. Needless to say, Kas was readmitted that afternoon. The decision was made to perform an intestinal biopsy on Monday. This wasn't a decision I was happy with be-camaraderie and relaxed atmosphere. The course was tough, but the sheep were manageable. Handlers lost sight of their sheep both on the fetch and the first leg of the drive. Here was the time when you needed a natural dog. There was stiff competition for the $1000 added purse, but only on the trial course itself. As the competitors left the field, they left any animosities behind. On Saturday night, everyone joined together with the Friends of Fosterfields in a catered dinner, and again on Sunday night for a pot luck dinner.

We had several firsts: Gwen Cassel placed in her first open trial (both days) -- congratulations Gwen. Becky Peterson placed her young Roy in the top ten, and Gene Sheninger placed young Robin -- look out futurity competitors, here we come! Becky won Best Shed of the entire weekend with Roy. Barb Armata took first place both days with her young dog Kelly in Novice/Novice with almost flawless runs (Saturday - 75; Sunday - 78 out of a possible 80) and received the Most Promising Young Dog and Handler award. She placed ahead of husband Bernie, who placed third and second both days respectively. Not daunted by his humiliation. Bernie moved his Chris up to Pro-Novice on Sunday and placed second -- congratulations Bernie! And last, Barbara Rosensteel leaves us for Tennessee. We hope that this will not be her last NEBCA Trial.

The Mid-Atlantic Border Collie Association donated a trophy for the high scoring Mid-Atlantic States Dog which was won by Cheryl Jagger Williams and Nell with a score of 206 for the combined two days. They also received the Championship award for the combined two days and Walt Jagger with his dog Celt was Reserve Champion.

And what a Judge: John Atkinson of Yorkshire, England did a superb job. He was consistent and fair on the Trial Field -- tough -- maybe he gave us too little time to complete the course; but he placed the dogs in the right order. Off the field, he was full of tales of trials past, tips to handlers, and guidance for our dogs.

Handlers and spectators alike have remarked on what a pleasant weekend was had by all.

cause I felt it was a bit radical. This was the best way to find out just exactly what it was. I had complete faith in my vet's decision. I checked in on him on Sunday and he was still vomiting periodically, but was alert and in good spirits, despite everything that was being done to him. He was on IVs. They were doing blood cultures, anti-biotic injections, and a catheter.

On Monday, Steven performed surgery. I waited, while nervously pacing, for word. All through this time I was getting great support from my family, my friends, and the vet's staff. My phone never stopped ringing. I was overwhelmed by all of the love and caring for this dog. Kas came through surgery and they found a white spot in his duodenum and about half of his small intestine was inflamed. Punches were taken of the spot and of the worst of the intestine for analysis. I brought Kas home on July 3rd weighing only about 40 lbs. (Kas is 22" at the shoulder and normally weighs 47-48 lbs.) He was tired and sore because of a 6 inch incision on his abdomen but, as always, his spirit was good and he was happy to be home.

Here we are almost a month later. The stitches were removed and Kas is recovering nicely. The pathology report returned with the biopsy results on July 17th. The diagnosis - allergic enteritis, a food allergy. His blood work also showed a very elevated WBC count caused by a secondary infection from the allergy, and a very low RBC count which showed anemia from the blood loss from the diarrhea. He was put on a broad spectrum sulfa drug, vitamins, and the prescription diet made by Hill's, D/D (dermatological diet) which he may have to eat for the rest of his life. It will take six months to a year to find out exactly what he is allergic to. Until then I supplement his diet with cooked rice, strained baby food lamb, lamb broth, and lamb bones. My friends, John and Suki Jamison, supply me with the bones. You might say that Kas has his own personal lamb line! I have also discovered several different ways to make hypoallergenic biscuits for him. In one recipe I use his dog food which has been ground up in a food processor and mix in an egg and cold lamb broth. Another recipe uses rice flour that I bought at a health food store, nonfat dry milk, sugar, salt, an egg, margarine, and cold water or lamb broth. He loves these, but they should be kept in the refrigerator because of the lack of preservatives. If anyone is interested in these recipes, just drop me a line.

Kas's prognosis is excellent and we are looking forward to getting back to work in both the obedience ring and the sheep field. Allergic enteritis can be treated and lived with, with some adjusting of diet and exercise. The dog's weight must be carefully monitored for sudden changes in either direction. As soon as Kas is feeling better, we will begin the arduous task of find out just what he is allergic to. In a month or so, we will get our lives back to normal. Well, as normal as they can be living with two Border Collies!

I hope that this article can be of help to anyone. If there is a sudden change in your dog's digestive tract, it just may be a food allergy. Kas was on the same food for two years before this suddenly appeared. The dog food companies do adjust their formulas according to the grain availability. Something as small as more corn in the food could cause an allergy.

stand and then make her wait. As with Boot's slow approach to sheep, her lack of a down is not nearly as apparent at home as it is at trials. The problem is there, however, or it would not be happening away from home. At home she can cheat a little and get away with it. In competition this isn't always possible. At this stage in Boot's career I am running her in open competition every weekend so I am reluctant to spend much time drilling her during the week. I still want her to enjoy what she is doing. I want her on edge and just a little out of control when I run her. Next year is time enough to get serious about these lessons.

Hope will never have Boot's problem about coming on to her sheep. At least once each training session she still manages to climb up on the back of one of my ewes for a quick grip and a short ride. We have done some wearing in the past few months and practiced doing wide flanks around the ewes. I have gradually widened these flanks into outruns. Hope has a tendency to sometimes spin around a few times before leaving me on an outrun. This spinning is a silly nervous thing that should be discouraged before it becomes a habit. Unfortunately, yelling at Hope about it only makes her worse. So we walk toward the sheep and I send her while we are still walking. This seems to prevent the spinning. Hope is gradually getting the outrun idea. Each week she seems to be a little more sensible about what she is doing and will go a little further. She is rather pushy coming back with her sheep. But, concerned that I might make her reluctant to come on to her sheep as Boot is, I have said nothing to her about this aside from a soft "steady" to ease her up a bit.

All of the practicing of big circles around the sheep in preparation for outruns has resulted in Hope learning her flank commands. She is not dependable yet but she has a definite idea of what the commands mean. We have started driving a little bit. She wants to look at me all of the time she is driving so I try to stay a little ahead of Hope and behind the sheep. Since Hope is faster and more aggressive than I am, this is a difficult position to maintain so our drives have been pretty short. When I feel Hope has driven the sheep as far as she will I flank her around them before she does this on her own. I try to flank her off the balance point when I do this, between me and the sheep. This is helping her learn her flanks and increases her willingness to work in front of me.

While in Canada I had an opportunity to do a little exhausting of sheep from the trial field with Hope. The sheep were leaving the trial field quite readily and needed only a little nudge in the direction of the exhaust pen. The real work was wonderful for Hope. It was hot and she settled down and got a lot more serious about what she was doing when she began to get a little tired. Setting out and exhausting sheep are wonderful experiences for young dogs when they are up to the work.

Hope and I have settled into a routine in our training. Each day we do an outrun, she fetches me the sheep and I have her drive them past me. Then we do a few wide circles around the sheep and drive them away again. When the sheep have settled, Hope and I leave them and do another outrun, repeating the entire process. I expect to pretty much follow this pattern for the next few months, requiring more obedience, better outruns and surer stops as Hope advances.

Boot's training at this stage is aimed at the October Futurity. I would like to have her pushing against her sheep a little better by then and stopping on command. Whether or not I succeed in this will no doubt be reflected in the outcome of the Futurity.

bought and raised these unsound dogs are warning the newcomers to buy from reputable breeders who eye and hip test their dogs before breeding, and who wait until the dogs are old enough to be accurately tested for these defects. Responsible breeders do exist! Unfortunately there will always be many naive newcomers who are attracted to these successful dogs and handlers and trustingly buy from them without checking on the soundness of their stock. Because it is successfully trialed and bred DOES NOT MAKE IT SOUND!!!

It's time the breed registries take a step toward demanding better quality from those dogs registered. As they have had success eliminating eye defects in England, let us devise a program to eliminate hip and eye problems before registering here too. It is obvious that there are many whose incomes will be lessened, but your reputations as breeders will appreciate as will the breed itself.

We ask you all that, at a time when the owners and breeders are looking at a dilemma that they feel may take the future of the breed down the road to destruction without any control by them, to please work for something that you have complete control over. BREED RESPONSIBLY for the future of the breed -- breed a dog that has the natural ability to work and who likewise has the physical ability to work. Until that time, it's buyer beware!
