Dog Whelping Calendar

A bitch bred on the date indicated by the large figure will be due to whelp on the date shown in smaller dates, immediately below. The name of the bitch may be written over the numerals for convenience in recording breeding date. Dates are based on the normal gestation period of 63 days, variations of two or three days either way are not unusual.

About the Border Collie

The Border Collie breed was developed by shepherds in Britain who were attempting to find the perfect sheepdog. Starting with the best dogs then available, they began selecting breeding stock that had the qualities they wanted. The dog had to have natural ability to work but be biddable and easily trained. It also had to be fast enough to catch and turn a running sheep and have the stamina to cover a hundred miles a day on the hill farms of Britain in summer and winter. The shepherds didn't particularly care how this perfect dog looked.

Today's Border Collie is the product of this selective breeding program. These dogs are intelligent, obedient, eager to please, easily trained, and have a strong natural instinct to herd. There remains, however, no standard of appearance for the breed. Border Collies vary in color from black, or black and white, or black and tan, to red merle, blue merle and red. Dogs vary in size from less than thirty pounds to more than sixty with an average weight of around forty pounds. A Border Collie's coat may be long and heavy or short and smooth or anything in between. The breeders of Collies today, as a hundred years ago, still examine each dog for its working ability and style, intelligence, temperament and physical stamina, knowing a good Border Collie by its work and not by its appearance.

Training

Border Collies are used to herd all types of livestock and poultry. The Border Collie is instinctively a "header". Its instinct tells the dog to gather and hold livestock, "heading off" any animal that attempts to leave the group. Most well bred Border Collies will demonstrate this instinctive desire to work anywhere from eight weeks to one year of age.

The dog trainer works with this natural tendency of the dog, encouraging it to gather stock into a group and keep them together while fetching them to the trainer. This is the point at which the dog's natural ability to "balance" on sheep is revealed. The dog instinctively positions itself in such a way that the stock move in a straight line to the handler. This is also when the dog is taught the commands for stopping (down), moving toward the stock (walk up), slowing down (steady or take time), moving clockwise around the stock (go bye or come bye) and counterclockwise (away to me) and finally stop working (that'll do). When these lessons have been learned the youngster is taught to drive the stock away from the handler instead of fetching them. The distance between the dog and handler is continually increased until the dog can work out of sight of its handler who may be a half mile or more away.

Most dogs are introduced to whistle commands at some point in their training. The sound of the whistle carries farther than the voice and is easier for the dog to understand at a distance. A dog that has progressed this far in training has become a very useful farm laborer capable of saving its owner an enormous amount of work.

Breeders' Directory

This listing of Border Collie breeders is for informational purposes only and in no way represents an endorsement of these breeders by the Northeast Border Collie Association. When making inquiries into purchasing a pup, NEBCA strongly recommends selecting from sound, proven, working stock. We suggest you see both parents work. If you are not able to see the parents working at the farm, do attend the trials and see them working there. Watch for trial results and seek the advice of experienced handlers.
